REPUBLICAN legislation since 1860 has done more to increase British manufactures, trade and wealth than the legislation of this country prior to 1860.

Mrs. Harrison's famous brew of claret punch is doubtless a better and far more aristocratic drink than hard cider. But it is not a strictly non-intoxicating beverage.

HAVING been sent as United States Minister to Turkey for writing a romance about Ben Hur, Gen. LEW WALLACE hopes to be sent back there for writing a romance about BEN HARRISON.

THE Chicago Tribune has picked one wing of the crow as yet and bids fair to have some of the bird hidden away in its haversack when November comes. It is supporting the ticket, but in muffled tones.

MORTON collected the boodle that carried Indiana for GARFIELD in 1880, but it is by no means certain that he can collect enough to carry it for HARRISON this year. JOHN C. NEW is already in New York after the first installment.

REFERENCES to LEVI P. MORTON's early life as a poor boy only remind people that he was not nominated as a poor man. As for the references to his paying after he became rich the debts of his old firm canceled in bankruptcy, they serve to remind people how inexhaustible his "bar" is, and how liberal he is with the contents.

AFTER producing so many unanswerable arguments against the nomination of HARRISON and MORTON, the Chicago Tribune is groping about in a dazed sort of way for arguments in favor of their election. It gathers only dust and chaff on which to rest a languid preference for Harrison crew as compared with Sherman crew.

In dwelling on the "potentialities of a dinner" and pointing with pride to his success in controlling the Chicago Convention with festive appliances, Mr. Dewey forgets that such dinners do not tickle the popular palate nor set well on the popular stomach. He should remember the effect of the "Belshazzar banquet" which the millionaires of New York gave Mr. BLAINE when they thought they had him elected.

The statement that Gen. HARRISON never drinks wine nor sets a wine bottle on his table, travels over the country cheek-by-jowl with the statement that Mrs. HARRISON's sideboard is noted for a "famous claret punch after the Tippecanoe recipe." The distance from sideboard to table may be short, but a man may top with claret punch at the sideboard until he cannot walk to the table without assistance.

HARRISON cannot say much about CLEVELAND's turning Republicans out of office to make room for Democrats, and the less the Republicans generally say about that matter the better for them. Somebody was turned out November 3, 1882, to make room for Senator HARRISON's father-in-law, Dr. JOHN W. SCOTT, who was given a clerkship in the Pension Office on that date, and who has held it all through CLEVELAND's administration, and still holds it at the age of 89 years.

SINCE reading the Republican platform's arraignment of the Democrats for not extending Government aid to the Nicaragua Canal as a great protector of American industry and commerce, the merchants and shipowners of England have indicated that scheme as an undertaking of the greatest importance to England's trade. They have been taught by long experience how beneficial the Republican party's "American policy" is to English interests.

DECLARATION AND CONSTITUTION.
The power of Congress "to lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts and excises" is expressly limited by the Constitution to these specified purposes: "To pay the debts and provide for the common defense and general welfare of the United States." This limitation is so plainly exclusive of taxation for other purposes that we need not quote the decisions in which the Supreme Court has denounced such taxation as robbery.

Nobody denies that where a tax, duty, impost or excise levied for revenue purposes can be laid so as to promote useful industries, Congress would only be providing for the common defense and general welfare in so levying it. That is what is meant by incidental protection—a tariff with revenue as the object and protection as the incident. But from HENRY CLAY down no statesman with any reputation as a lawyer or any respect for the established interpretation of the Constitution has ever contended that Congress has power to levy taxes regardless of revenue, much less to prevent the collection of revenue by preventing imports and "cutting off our trade with foreign countries." The Declaration of Independence protested against that sort of thing, and the framers of the Constitution had no more idea of authorizing Congress to build a Chinese wall around this country when they conferred the taxing power than they had when they inserted the provision that "no tax or duty shall be laid on articles exported from any State."

Now, however, a new Estate of Incorporated Capital has arisen in the land, and ideas unknown to the earlier statesmen of the Republic and opposed to the equality of social conditions which they aimed at, are asserting themselves. A bloated aggregation of powerful monopolists has succeeded in committing the Republican party openly to the unconstitutional Chinese wall policy. Some of the organs, reversing the constitutional grand power, demand "a tariff for protection, with incidental revenue," regardless of surplus accumulations in the Treasury. But Congressmen JACKSON of Pennsylvania has, without denial in the House, put this interpretation on the platform: "The Republican party promises, when it shall gain secure full control of the Government, to revise the tariff so as to get less income from the tariff. But, with very few exceptions, it will do this by making the tariff 'higher.'"

Everybody knows that a tariff tax thus laid, not to produce revenue, but to make importation impossible, would simply put the entire population of this country at the mercy of monopoly combinations and transfer to them unconstitutionally the taxing power of Congress. It would gorge their greed with the life-blood of every industry in the land. It would deprive us of that freer trade and intercourse with all the world which our fathers declared and fought for in 1776. If they had been afraid of free trade they would not have extended it by our Federal Constitution over the vast area of this Union for internal traffic, and so cautiously limited the power to lay imposts, taxes and embargoes on our foreign trade. People who are familiar with the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States are not liable to have a case of patriotic jim-jams from sympathy with a Pennsylvania monopolist who can see all sorts of "free-trade" horrors in a 10 per cent reduction of a 47 per cent tariff on imports.

The telegram in which SHERMAN notified FORAKER that he had declined the request of McKINLEY's friends, and insisted on a test vote on BLAINE with Ohio united on SHERMAN, throws a good deal of light on the labor of the mountain that brought forth HARRISON. SHERMAN had offered not to be a candidate against BLAINE, and had thus obtained BLAINE's promise not to be a candidate against him. SHERMAN was thus enabled to prevent BLAINE's nomination by staying in the race to the last. The Blaine men in the Ohio delegation were in the plot to get SHERMAN out of the way, but he had them pledged to stand by him till he released them, and he would not release them. By thus forcing the Blaine men to combine on HARRISON to beat SHERMAN, the latter got even with BLAINE for beating him with GARFIELD in 1880. It is a pretty little story of political fit-for-tat, but the revenge to grow out of it in Ohio and Indiana politics may be expected to appear in serial form hereafter.

"VERILY, the newspaper is a thing of the day only," says the Lowell Citizen. "How flat, stale and unprofitable read the 'convention predictions of the Sunday press' after the nomination of Monday." Yes, and how weary, stale, flat and unprofitable read the speculations of the Monday morning papers after the Post-

DISPATCH came out in the afternoon with a full report of the day's proceedings, for which the readers of morning papers had to wait until Tuesday.

In spite of the fact that the first BEN HARRISON on record was born in Surrey County, Va., in 1645, thus making a gap which nobody has tried to bridge over between the family of Gov. BEN HARRISON of Virginia and that of the Regicide HARRISONS of England, a good many papers are still asserting the descent of the Republican nominee from the old Cromwellian HARRISONS. The claim of such descent rests wholly on surmises that are contradicted by record evidence and rejected by the historians of Virginia and of the United States. When they try to trace the Harrison blood back to POCAHONTAS, the common ancestor of all the "first families of Virginia," they succeed better in making the connection.

AUSTRIA's alarm over the visit of the German Emperor to St. Petersburg shows how shaky the Austro-German alliance is. But WILLIAM, while BISMARCK lives, will hardly be such a madcap as to outrage the very strong anti-Russian feeling of his own people and to alarm all Europe by throwing Austria over in the interest of Russia's plans with reference to the Balkan States. A Russo-German alliance on that basis would be the mightiest combination the world ever saw, but for that very reason it would drive all the rest of Europe into a still mightier combination for self-defense. Such a collision would be productive of both social and political earthquakes, and thrones would totter from the Urals to Gibraltar.

MEN OF MARK.
SENATOR FAIR, despite recent reverses, is said still to be worth $200,000.

HERN DONOHUE's colossal marble bust of Prince Bismarck is said to be the best ever made.

SIR MORRIS MACKENZIE is afflicted with asthma, and smokes stramonium cigarettes to obtain relief therefrom.

GEN. O'BRYAN, the new Minister of War of Spain, is an Irishman by descent, though born in the land of garlic and guitars.

The late Eugene Bimmel, the London performer, left an estate valued at $100,000. He evidently knew how to make dollars and cents.

MAYOR HEWITT of New York knows when he has had enough. He declares that under no circumstances will he be a candidate for reelection.

The Grand Duke Alexis, brother of the Czar, is said to be able to drink more champagne than any other European prince, even in Russia.

MR. ALMA TADEMA is described as a well-built man, of average height, quiet in his movements and speaking English with a little hesitation.

CARDINAL MAZZOPANI, the linguist, who is said to have known a hundred languages, declared that he never forgot a word he had once learned.

HENRY GUY CARLETON, the well-known New York journalist, lies in a critical condition in his apartments at the Lotus Club in that city. His malady is peritonitis.

The Duke of Portland won only $17,500 by the Derby victory of his horse Ayraith. The heaviest winner was T. G. Wilson, book-maker, who cleared $60,000.

SIGNOR CAMPANINI claims the Sheriff of officers who were lying in wait for him, and sailed for Italy. He claims to have lost $45,000 on his late operative venture, but threatens to try it again next season.

PRESIDENT CARNOT of France will spend the summer in writing a history of himself and his ancestors. When a Frenchman wants leisure in which to pursue his personal designs he seeks the Presidency.

WOMEN OF THE WORLD.
THERE are fifteen clubs of working girls in New York and vicinity.

The Woman's Bicycle Club of Washington has upward of seventy members.

AUNT ANNIE ROUSE of Meigs County, O., who was 101 last Monday, has 600 descendants.

QUEEN VICTORIA sometimes suffers from insomnia by having her brows stroked gently with a camel's hair brush.

MISS MARY A. RICH of Athletics is the first woman graduate of the Kansas State University's department of pharmacy.

SARAH BERNHARDT recently spent an afternoon at Monte Carlo and won $600 at roulette. As a player Sarah is extremely versatile.

MISS ANNE CONY, Buffalo Bill's daughter, acts the style at North Platte, Neb., now that she has returned from her trip to Europe.

PRINCESS BEATRICE BATTENBERG is taking a variety of internal and outward methods for the reduction of her obesity, which threatens to become abnormal.

MRS. ZERILDA G. WALLACE, who is generally referred to as the mother of Gen. Lew Wallace, is in reality his step-mother. His mother died when he was a boy.

AMELIE RIVES, the novelist, sent her signature to fourteen different editors on a wager that all could read it. The nearest that any one made it out was "American Rivers."

BEILA LOCKWOOD was asked the other day how she would manage the army in case of her election as President, and replied: "I would dismiss the armies and rule by love."

MISS M. A. WIDMAN has been elected to a fellowship in mathematics at Cornell University. Miss J. W. Snow is elected a fellow in botany, and Miss M. M. Wardell a fellow in architecture. Thus women get half the Cornell fellowships this year.

MRS. MARSHALL O. ROBERTS of New York is understood to have completed her matrimonial negotiations with the Earl of Arran, and the rich American widow and the Irish nobleman will be united in the fall. Mrs. Roberts' income will be $25,000 a year.

GEN. BOULANGER's mother, who is a Welsh woman, is 84 years of age. She lives quietly at Villa d'Avray. Her sons are very kind to her and has always shown her a great deal of attention. The old lady's mind began to give way about two years ago, but she is by no means an imbecile. Gen. Boulanger has just sent to her house all the decorations, gifts, pictures, bric-a-brac, etc., which used to adorn his study at Clermont-Ferrand.

How Mr. Dewey's Speeches Are Made.
From the London Figure.
Mr. Chauncey Dewey, who, in spite of the fact that the National Convention of the Democratic party at St. Louis unanimously adopted Mr. Cleveland as their party candidate, is still said to be in the running for the American Presidency, keeps a private Secretary of the name of Du Val. Mr. Du Val keeps for Mr. Dewey a scrap book or memorandum book of well-informed men. If Mr. Dewey is asked to speak at a country fair, at the laying of a corner-stone, at a birthday dinner in honor of Tom, Dick or Harry, at a college celebration, at any significant point where a particular theme needs special outworking on lines with which he is not personally familiar he tells Du Val to look the subject up. Du Val sends for the man who is well informed on the particular point to be illustrated, sucks him dry, puts in syllabuses the entire subject before Dewey, who studies it, crams with it, and then having thoroughly digested delivers it to his secretary, who takes it down in shorthand. This, being translated by the typewriter, is like an open book to the orator, who reads it exactly. Literally commits it to memory and very often has it set up in printed slips for distribution to the reporters.

How Monopoly Got Haymond.
Henry George in the Standard.

Among the most prominent figures in the convention was Creed Haymond, chairman of the California delegation and foremost among the "boomers" of "Blaine and Protection." To those who knew him years ago it seemed a queer place for him to be. Creed Haymond is a Virginian by birth and a Democrat by instinct and tradition. During the war in California he was a stout and energetic anti-monopoly, free trade Democrat. He is a fine lawyer, a man of exceedingly quick and nimble mind, and, like most southern men of his class, a born politician. He rendered very efficient aid to Gov. Haight in his struggle with the Pacific railway monopoly, and no one in the country has a better knowledge of the Chicago Convention with a Jeffersonian speech. But like many other men in California, Creed Haymond at length grew tired of what seemed an utterly hopeless fight, and the railroad octopus, true to its policy of taking into its service men of ability who might be dangerous to it outside, made him head of its law bureau with a salary of $25,000 a year. Thus it comes that Creed Haymond makes his appearance in a National Republican Convention at the head of a delegation representing the Central Pacific Railroad line.

Harrison for Tariff Reduction Six Years Ago.
Letter Published in Boston Herald.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 28, 1887.—I have not been expected to go much into print upon the subject of the future policy of our party, or as to the duty of our friends in the approaching session of Congress. I do not affect to be a leader of thought among so many of greater experience. I think that the revenue question, involving both internal and customs revenue, should be dealt with this winter. We were fully committed at the last session to this work. Our bill to reduce internal revenue, as proposed at the last session, has been modified and is now promptly passed. The creation of the tariff Commission was a confession that the tariff needs revision. If the report comes in it should be acted upon. My opinion is that no time should be lost after Congress assembles in bringing forward these measures, that there should be no time lost during the holidays by adjournment, and that the revenue question should be promptly passed. did not live to know Col. Ingersoll in the zenith of his celebrity, or he would probably have acknowledged that his rule, like most others, had an exception. Ingersoll has many combatants, but his real, serious, personal enemy hasn't been discovered.

Col. Ingersoll's daughters are brilliant girls. Not in the sense that Society terms its girls brilliant;—they are not brilliant in show, and their vivacity does not bubble when about the subject. They are brainy. They have read and studied deeply. They have a fine scientific knowledge of the world, and of the events and phases of the time. Still, these two young ladies have by no means neglected themselves in the slightest manner. They are as well dressed as the girls of the day, and they possess in a remarkable degree the gift of entertainments. One of them, Miss J. Ingersoll, is a most interesting conversationalist. She has stored up in her mind a vast amount of knowledge which she recalls in the most minute manner and with the greatest accuracy. She has a fine power of recollection. She can tell, for instance, the date of birth or death of any important composer, or the names of the persons who were contemporaries. This quite unusual gift she carries into other fields, and her information is so widespread and so accurate that but for her singularly unassuming and unassuming politeness, we should be quite afraid to talk to her.

brother, Eben C. Angstrom, of whom Mr. Townsend has heard, was in Congress from 1868 to 1872 the Peoria district, in Illinois. He succeeded Lovejoy, who was a very able and successful legislator, as an ordinary speaker. Indeed the gift of oratory is strongly developed throughout the family, having been inherited, no doubt, from the father, who was a Doctor of Divinity. Another brother, Dr. John Lugerholm, living at Waukeusa, Wis., is a noted speaker on the subject of temperance. He is a very able and successful legislator, and in 1884, and he very closely resembles his more respected brother, although he keeps strictly to the letter of the law. In the family respect is, as Mr. Francis Wilson would observe, "Not the same."

IV.
AT HOME AND ON THE PLATFORM.

The Sunday night receptions which occur regularly at the Ingersoll mansion are the and of the evening reception. Those who are drawn together upon these occasions, and, moreover, those who are drawn to the Ingersoll receptions, as was the case in Washington, find in this city there is a social life which is equally as refined that regularity in visiting one house as another is to be wondered at. Among the frequent visitors to the Ingersoll home, Joseph Jefferson, Stuart Robson, W. M. W. Henry, Harry Edwards, Helen Dauvray and many others are to be seen. It is not so with the frequent visitors when they are in the city. Occasionally John Mariow, the young actor, and the other well known society actors, are seen a few months ago, and then as often seen in the Ingersoll home. It is these Sunday night receptions where the Ingersolls are indeed a great favorite with the entire family, and Col. Ingersoll himself is a frequent visitor. Among the frequent visitors of the future, Fawcett, Saitus, Isaac H. Kelley, and no end of people whose names are not remembered. The Ingersolls are to be seen among the frequent callers. In point of fact, this weekly opportunity to come into the Ingersoll home is a great pleasure to Col. Ingersoll and his altogether charming family is greatly seized upon by the best members of the city. The Ingersoll home is the place where discussions thus become exceedingly important.

his boyhood, Ingersoll was not trained for the law, but he was a draughtsman, and that was in the capacity of a school teacher in Illinois. Even in those early days he had a reputation for being a "strong opinion" man, and the dogmas and creeds of the church, and had no more conviction than he has at present in making any solemn statement. The only consolation was that he could not be called a hypocrite.

Parents and school trustees were greatly shocked at what they deemed his violent and intemperate conduct, and they were filled with a terror upon what might be the result of teaching so far as the young idea of liberty was concerned. He was told that Ingersoll was unable to continue in his position, and he was obliged to leave the school to join that gentleman in the practice of the law. For some years the two brothers were in partnership in the city of Chicago, which the then remote districts of Illinois surrounded. Gradually both of them became convinced that the law was not the thing for them, but by reason of their gifts of oratory, and their fertile imaginations in advertising, and their keen sense of justice, and their keen sense of the abuses in the same courts with Lincoln, they still aim high as a teacher of the people.

When the bar broke out, Ingersoll went to the front, and he was the first to be killed.

V.
AS A LAWYER.

His Religious Attitude.
at the urgent solicitation of his brother

Two days ago case was tried in this city. When Col. Ingersoll and Mr. Choate were seated at the table, the latter addressed the plaintiff, who had sue a corporation for breach of contract. The case was not a very important one, and the counsel addressed the jury. He commenced by saying there was only one point on which the plaintiff's story in this case and that point was the presence of Col. Ingersoll as the opponent of the plaintiff's story. The jury, however, observed Mr. Choate, immediately, that Col. Ingersoll has been in the wool of the law for more than any other lawyer in this country. The celebrated lawyer then proceeded for some time to tell the jury of the various attacks upon the plaintiff, who was a tall man physically, and who sat almost straight up in his chair. He related the accusations of blackmail and general villany which were heaped at him by Lawyer Choate. He then proceeded to tell the jury how he arose, and, after retorting to the effect that the case was a personal one, he turned to the case as a result the intelligence of the jury. He took up his client's case, and, at the same time, he told the jury of the character of the opposing counsel. He eulogized the character of his client in such eloquent terms that the jury were almost ready to spring forward from their seats, seized Col. Ingersoll's hand and exclaimed: "I do not believe the case is true." The jury then found him. He did get the verdict, however, but he had the amount of his claim, with additional interest, paid him.

Some months ago a statement was made that he had received a large amount of money through a very large investment, and his life was always full of the stirring scenes of the stage, the opportunities of friends and strangers alike. As a matter of fact, he had no money, and he was not a member of any of those who know him that as a result of reality a much poorer man than would be the case if he had a large and long continued earnings. His expenditure in the neighborhood of $30,000 a year, for the support of his family and the needs of his people's interests, he has no opportunity of receiving the value of his own money. He has no money, and he is rapidly getting poorer and poorer. He is everywhere beloved and respected, his life full of life, his tenderness of heart and his mental force, but, altogether remains of the rugged and stirring figure of the
